

1

2

3

4

5

6

13

14

15

B is for...
Bananas?

16

B is for...
Baby!

17

B is for Biscuit!

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

29

30

31

32

33

37

38

39

40

41

42

43

44

45

46

47

48

49

50

51

Polling Question

67

68

69

88

89

90

94

95

96

97

98

99

112

113

114

118

119

120

121

122

123

124

125

126

127

128

129

130

131

132

133

134

135

139

140

141

142

143

144

COPYRIGHTED MATERIAL, PROPERTY OF
BRUNNEN AND BUNZING
AS REPRESENTED BY BRUNNEN Like the slingshot.

145

And the llama.

146

COPYRIGHTED MATERIAL, PROPERTY OF
BRUNNEN AND BUNZING
AS REPRESENTED BY BRUNNEN And the balloon.

147

But the drum was the biggest mistake.

148

"We shouldn't have given her that drum," said her father.

"What?" said her mother. "The drum is too loud, I can't hear you."

149

"The drum was a big mistake," said her father.

"That sounds like a wonderful idea," said her mother, who still couldn't hear what he was saying.

150

The next day her father said,
"Pakko, why don't you take your drum outside for a little while."
"But don't make too much noise.
We're just a little frog family that lives in a mushroom, and we don't like drawing attention to ourselves."

Illustration by Shirley and Lawrence
Kerr

151

Illustration by Shirley and Lawrence
Kerr

It had just rained, and the forest was sparkling like an emerald.

152

Illustration by Shirley and Lawrence
Kerr

And it was very quiet.

153

Pikko started tapping on her drum just to keep herself company. But something stirred behind her.

COPYRIGHTED MATERIAL, courtesy of Bristol Art Education in partnership with 154

A raccoon playing a banjo started following her. So Pikko hit her drum louder.

COPYRIGHTED MATERIAL, courtesy of Bristol Art Education in partnership with 155

And then a rabbit playing a trumpet started following them. But Pikko kept playing her drum.

COPYRIGHTED MATERIAL, courtesy of Bristol Art Education in partnership with 156

And then a wolf—who couldn't really play anything, but was very happy to be near the music—joined in. And Piko still played her drum.

157

But then the wolf ate the rabbit, and Piko stopped playing her drum and faced the wolf and said, "No more eating band members or you're out of the band."

158

"I'm sorry," said the wolf, and he meant it.

159

Handwriting practice lines (10 horizontal lines).

Handwriting practice lines (10 horizontal lines).

Handwriting practice lines (10 horizontal lines).

Illustration by David and Victoria
de la Cruz for the author.
And then they all started playing again, and soon there was a crowd of animals playing instruments . . .

160

Illustration by David and Victoria
de la Cruz for the author.
And they were all following Piko.

161

162

175

176

177

178

179

180

181

182

183

187

188

189

190

191

192

193

194

195

202

Polling Question

- Does this book speak to you?
- If so, in what way?

203

204

208

209

210

214

215

216 bookvine.com
